Sailors Returning to Civilian Life Must Attend Transition Assistance Program

Recognizing the need, Commander, Navy Installations Command's (CNIC) Fleet and Family Support Centers (FFSC) offer Transition Assistance Program (TAP) classes to facilitate a smooth transition from military to civilian life for Sailors and their families.

Attending TAP is crucial for Sailors transitioning out of the military. The civilian employment landscape is constantly evolving and can be daunting for individuals returning to civilian life. TAP equips Sailors with tools to help them adapt to their new environment, providing resources for employment, financial stability, veteran benefits and an emotional support network, all of which contribute to a comprehensive transition process.

In compliance with Department of Defense (DoD) Instruction 1332.35, Transition Assistance Program (TAP) for Military Personnel, in-person TAP workshops are the DoD's preferred method of service delivery. Recognizing that a Sailor's schedule is hectic, the Navy offers Virtual TAP (VTAP) workshops as well.

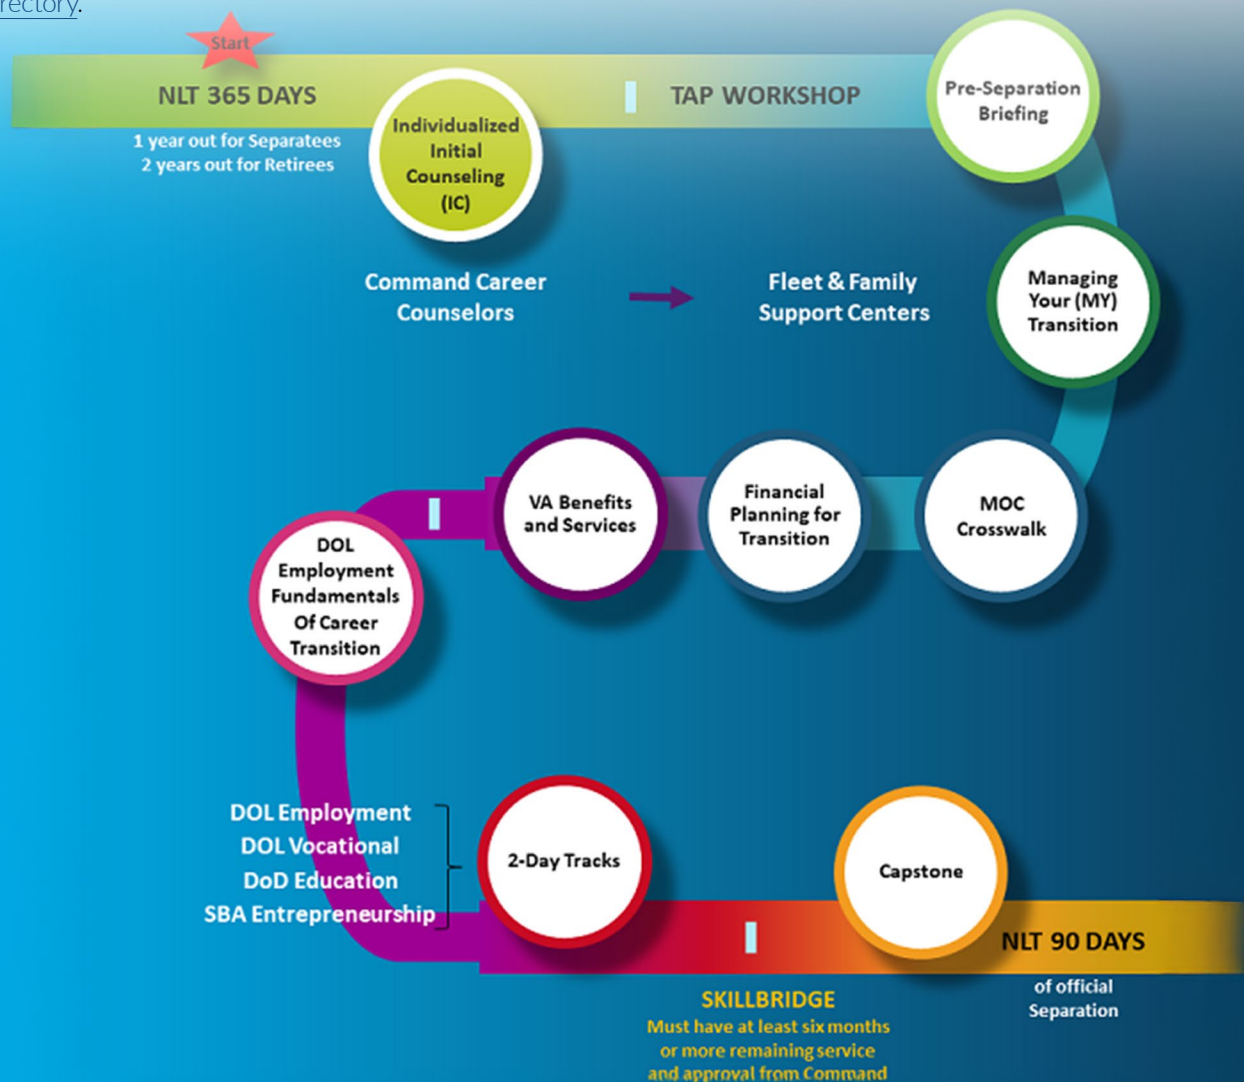

VTAP is geared toward, but not limited to, Sailors whose duty locations are in remote or isolated geographic areas, have a short-notice separation, or, as outlined in Chapter 58 of Title 10, U.S.C., who cannot access in-person workshops in a timely manner.

Navy VTAP workshops were originally developed to meet needs that emerged during the COVID-19 pandemic, but they also serve Sailors who are deployed or work irregular hours and cannot attend in-person TAP classes. Sailors participating in VTAP webinars can expect an informative and interactive discussion. This format aims to keep Sailors engaged and ensure they maximize their learning experience. Sailors can ask questions and receive real-time feedback, enhancing the overall dynamic and effectiveness of the learning process.

The webinars can be accessed and viewed on the Fleet and Family Support Program's \(FFSP\) Learning Management System \(LMS\).

Sailors and their families do not have to wait to attend. TAP is available to all eligible service members and their families throughout their military careers. Sailors who are within two years of retirement and no later than 365 days from separation or release are strongly encouraged to contact their command career counselor to ensure a smooth transition before returning to civilian life. Sailors will receive the same information and support through VTAP as they do during in-person TAP classes, allowing service members to follow the steps for a stress-free transition to civilian life.

Sailors should begin their transition process as soon as possible. For more information, visit any local FFSC or find their contact information in the FFSC Directory.

FFSP Launches Third Career Transition Series Following Spring Success

Following the success of its Career Transition Series this spring, the Fleet and Family Support Program is providing future webinar opportunities. The next CTS will take place during the last quarter of the fiscal year, offering essential resources to help participants navigate career changes, organizational transitions or retirement.

According to Ebonie Powe, Commander, Navy Installations Command's (CNIC) Family Employment Readiness Program (FERP) analyst, the Career Transition Series offers job seekers a leg up in securing a career.

"The launch of the widely attended series attracted both returning and new job seekers who are eager to take advantage of the extended webinar schedule," said Powe. "Having this adds so much value, and we are very excited to provide this for our community."

Powe, who played a pivotal role in coordinating both the April and June summits, is building on the Career Transition Series's momentum; the upcoming sessions promise to deliver even more assistance.

"Participants can expect expert-led discussions on an array of relevant topics that include transferrable skills, creating a civilian résumé, civilian interviews, the Thrift Savings Plan and more," Powe exclaimed.

The number of topics covered during the series means there is something for everyone. "The series will also spotlight community resources for support and networking," said Powe.

Whether you are transitioning out of the military, shifting careers or exploring new opportunities, the Career Transition Series is an event designed to empower and equip you for your next chapter. Dates for the event will be released soon.

Check with your Fleet and Family Support Center \(FFSC\) for training opportunities and to answer any questions you may have to help your career transition go as smoothly as possible.

Get Your Summer Going, Visit America's National Parks

Are you looking for a family friendly, fun and low-cost activity that everyone can enjoy? Look no further than the United States national parks! The national parks are 63 hidden gems that can be found in 30 states and two U.S. territories. These parks are congressionally protected areas which preserve the beautiful habitat for all to enjoy, offering outdoor adventures, history and an ecological haven for wildlife.

The U.S. national parks' origin dates to 1872, when Congress established Yellowstone National Park. In 1916, President Woodrow Wilson signed The National Park Service Organic Act, creating the National Park Service we enjoy today. The National Park Service has expanded to 433 sites, monuments and parks across the U.S. and its territories (nps.gov).

Visiting the parks is beneficial in many ways, including mental and physical health. The parks offer creative outlets for improving physical and mental health, including hiking, whitewater rafting, rock climbing, birdwatching, camping and biking to build your strength and improve endurance. If you are seeking less strenuous activities, there is always the option to enjoy the peace and quiet of nature while taking in the breathtaking views. Simply being in nature offers a way to improve your mood, reduce stress and practice mindfulness.

The parks are designed for people of all ages and physical abilities while providing a low-cost choice for accessible interests for everyone. There are many ticket options for visiting the sites, including passes for military, seniors, fourth graders, volunteers and an annual pass. Children can participate in Junior Ranger program activities. These activities include scavenger hunts and kid friendly places to explore. Each park has a visitor center where you can learn the history of the park.

There are many options to explore, from historic ships and churches to the homes of notable Americans and natural wonders. The national parks provide a way to celebrate this land that is your land. Plan a trip that is calming, mindful and reduces the stress of any day, or a trip focused on celebrating the history of our country. Anyone can build an adventure this summer. Visit the National Park Service website and plan your bucket list adventures for years to come. These trips will make memories for your family.

Some national parks may require reservations or timed entry permits, particularly during peak season, to manage visitor numbers and protect natural resources. For more information on America's national parks, visit the National Park Service website.

Emergency Family Assistance Center: A Lifeline During Disasters

▲ NSA Hampton Roads FFSC conducted its annual tabletop exercise focused on establishing an Emergency Family Assistance Center (EFAC). Representatives from various services, including Child and Youth Programs, participated to discuss their roles during EFAC activation.

When disasters strike – whether natural, man-made or personal – military families face unique challenges that require specialized support. The Fleet and Family Support Center (FFSC), through its Emergency Family Assistance Center (EFAC), serves as a critical resource in these times of crisis. Designed to provide coordinated support, the EFAC ensures that service members and their families have access to the information, resources and care they need during emergencies.

“The safety and well-being of our Sailors and their families is our top priority. The Emergency Family Assistance Center ensures that, no matter the crisis, our military community has a trusted resource to turn to for guidance, support and care. It’s about standing strong together – before, during and after the storm,” said Capt. Matthew Olson, commanding officer, Naval Support Activity (NSA) Hampton Roads, Virginia.

An EFAC is a one-stop shop, either physical or virtual, activated during crises to support the military community. It is managed by the FFSC in coordination with base leadership and other installation services. EFACs are typically activated in response to:

- Natural disasters such as hurricanes, floods, wildfires and earthquakes.
- Man-made incidents including terrorist attacks, active shooter situations and industrial accidents.
- Personal emergencies such as mass evacuations, casualties or large-scale family disruptions.

The EFAC streamlines communication and consolidates support services to reduce confusion and stress during chaotic times.

When activated, an EFAC becomes a one-stop shop for essential services, such as information dissemination, updates on the situation, safety protocols, evacuation routes and return-to-duty instructions. Family accountability and reunification is always a top priority. Crisis counseling and emotional support through licensed counselors provide mental health support for those affected by the events. Legal and financial assistance is readily accessible for legal guidance, emergency funds and help with insurance claims. Housing and relocation services help find temporary shelter and relocation options. Emergency childcare services and activities support children in crisis through Child and Youth programs.

“The Emergency Family Assistance Center plays a vital role in our emergency response efforts, and the Fleet and Family Support Center is at the heart of its success. Our expertise, compassion and coordination ensure our Navy families receive the support they need when it matters most. Together, we strengthen the resilience of the military families we serve,” said Elizabeth Bell, NSA Hampton Roads FFSC director.

These services are designed to reduce stress and restore stability as quickly as possible. Moreover, EFACs play a key role in maintaining mission readiness. By supporting families on the home front, EFACs enable service members to focus on their duties without the added burden of personal uncertainty.

The FFSC’s EFAC is more than a program – it is a vital part of the Navy’s commitment to its people. In times of crisis, EFACs stand ready to provide calm, competent and compassionate care. Whatever the disaster, military families can count on the EFAC to guide them through the storm.

Protect What You've Earned: Watch Out for Scams this Military Consumer Month

July is Military Consumer Month, a time to help the military community with tools to protect what really matters: your money, your identity and your peace of mind.

Being part of the military community is a unique lifestyle. With constant moves, deployments and juggling finances from a distance, it is easy for scammers to take advantage of the busy pace and the challenges you face. These bad actors know what they are doing and often pretend to be government agencies or well-known organizations to gain your trust, which is why being alert and informed is so important.

Protecting yourself starts with knowing what to look out for and how to respond when something does not feel right. Before you can defend your finances, you must understand how the enemy operates.

To keep your finances safe, you need to know the four red flags of a scam. Scammers are clever but often use the same tactics. Ensure you can recognize the redflags before scammers gain access to your money or personal information:

1. They pretend to be someone you know.

Scammers may impersonate representatives from the Defense Finance and Accounting Service, your bank, TRICARE or even a charity supporting veterans. Just because a caller or email appears official does not mean it is official. Scammers can fake names, email addresses and even spoof phone numbers.

2. They create urgency around a problem or a prize.

Whether it is a "security issue with your bank account" or an unexpected "sweepstakes win," a scammer's goal is to provoke panic or excitement, preventing you from asking questions. Remember, you should never have to pay to claim a prize.

3. They pressure you to act immediately.

Scammers aim to keep you from taking a moment to think. They might threaten arrest, loss of benefits, or computer viruses. If someone tells you "don't hang up" or "this is your only chance," consider it a red flag.

4. They want payment in unusual ways.

No legitimate business or agency will ask for payment via gift cards, cryptocurrency or wire transfers. If someone insists you use these methods, it is a scam, plain and simple.

Know How to Protect Yourself and Your Family

- Screen and block unwanted calls and texts. Use a call-blocking app and report junk messages.
- Don't share personal information just because someone asks. If the request is unexpected – especially if it comes by phone, text, or email – it is a strong sign something is not right. Scammers are skilled at making their requests sound urgent, routine or even helpful, but legitimate organizations will never ask for sensitive information, such as your Social Security number, bank account details, or credit card numbers out of the blue. Always verify first; when in doubt, contact the organization directly using a trusted phone number or website, not the one a potential scammer gives you.
- Avoid clicking links in emails or texts. Even if the message seems legitimate, navigate directly to the company's verified website instead.
- Pause and consult someone you know and trust. If something feels off, even if it sounds official or urgent, take a moment to step back and talk it through with someone outside the situation. Scammers count on catching you off guard, but a second opinion can make all the difference. Whether it is a close friend, your ombudsman, the base legal office or your installation's personal financial manager (PFM), having another perspective can help you see red flags you might have missed.
- Report scams promptly. Visit the Federal Trade Commission's fraud reporting website to help stop scammers in their tracks.

Financial Readiness Is Mission Readiness

Financial readiness is mission readiness. By learning how scams work and staying alert to red flags, you are doing more than protecting your wallet – you are protecting your family's stability, your peace of mind and your ability to stay mission-ready at every stage of military life.

Military Consumer Month is more than just awareness, it is a call to action to take control of your financial well-being. This is a great time to review your financial protections, learn how to spot scams and strengthen your defenses.

Your local PFM and Command Financial Specialist (CFS) are here to help. They offer free, confidential support on consumer-related topics, including scam prevention, budgeting assistance, understanding credit reports and protecting your identity, so you can safeguard what you have worked so hard to earn.

To find a PFM at your installation, visit the FFSC Directory to take the first step toward staying informed and protecting yourself from consumer scams.

Summer Fun with Your Installation's FFSC

We are halfway through the year, halfway through summer vacation, and halfway through permanent change of station (PCS) season; July is truly a month of transitions. Many use this time to reflect on their New Years' resolutions (remember those?), take pride in all they have accomplished or survived thus far and create a plan for what they want the rest of the year to look like. To help with your midyear review, here are five fun ideas from your installation's Fleet and Family Support Center (FFSC).

1. Commemorate the year with a collection. Create your own playlist of iconic songs you listened to on repeat throughout the months. Sum up each month into one word and journal about why that word resonates with you. Write a reverse bucket list to highlight the things you have already accomplished and are grateful to put behind you. Create a calendar scrapbook with photo memories assigned to each day you took a picture.
2. Revisit your New Year's resolutions. Take pride in the resolutions you stuck with and do not punish yourself for having neglected the rest. According to a 2023 Forbes study, only 6% of people keep their resolutions. Not one of the 6%? Good news, no one cares! If you are in the 80% who abandoned your resolution within the first month, or if you never even made a resolution to begin with, the only judge involved in this trial is you. So go easy on yourself and try again. You will be glad you did. Take advantage of the lovely weather and go for a walk, do a pool workout or participate in an MWR fitness class. Instead of barbecuing burgers and hot dogs at the next picnic, try out these delicious, nutritious grillable alternatives from the American Heart Association. Give your resolutions another chance, you are worth it!
3. Keep yourself grounded in the present with mindfulness. Attend your local Fleet and Family Support Center's (FFSC) virtual or in-person Mind Body Mental Fitness class to learn tips and tricks to strengthen your mindset, boost your stress tolerance, communicate more effectively and so much more. Start here with the Virtual FFSC Webinar schedule.
4. Lay out the next six months with a vision board. Something magical happens when you put your plans on paper; they become more likely to happen! Find pictures and words in old magazines that represent your goals for the rest of the year. If you do not have magazines, use the local library to make copies. Arrange everything in a way that appeals to you visually and place your newly created vision board in a place you will see it often. Have children? Make this a family project to learn what your kids' hopes are for the future.
5. Begin budgeting for upcoming, more expensive months. It is hard to think about it, but back-to-school supplies, Halloween costumes, Thanksgiving feasts, holiday presents and end-of-year travels are all right around the corner. Americans spend approximately $1,000 on Christmas alone; more than a whole paycheck for some. Begin planning and saving for these tighter months with the help of your personal financial readiness team. Schedule a free, confidential one-on-one with your Command Financial Specialist, personal finance manager or virtual work and family life consultant today!

For more information and to contact your installation's Fleet and Family Support Center visit the FFSC Directory.

GOOD NEWS!

What's Happening? Good News from Local Fleet and Family Support Centers

Kings Bay Holds Suicide Prevention Forum

The Naval Submarine Base Kings Bay's suicide prevention coordinators from across the fleet and shore commands convened for an essential forum dedicated to promoting suicide prevention efforts in May.

This event served as a critical platform for coordinators – those on the front lines of safeguarding Sailors' mental health – to exchange best practices, receive specialized training and reinforce the Navy's commitment to proactive suicide prevention.

Recognizing the unique pressures faced by military personnel, the forum created a space for honest conversations, shared experiences and actionable strategies aimed at saving lives and promoting resilience within the military community. Chaplains and mental health experts led discussions covering critical topics such as early intervention, support and resources following a suicide or traumatic loss and community-based support systems.

Throughout the forum, coordinators emphasized the shared mission to stand vigilant in protecting every service member's well-being and to promote an environment where seeking help is encouraged and supported.

Return & Reunions, Part of the FFSC's Continuing Support of the Fleet

Before the Harry S. Truman Carrier Strike Group returned to its homeport in Virginia in June, the crew went through the Fleet and Family Support Program's Return & Reunion (R&R) training.

Ahead of deploying, all U.S. Navy strike groups, ships and commands are offered R&R training before returning home to their loved ones.

Last year, a team from the Military and Family Support Center (MFSC) at Joint Base Pearl Harbor-Hickam (JBPHH) deployed in support of USS Frank E. Peterson Jr. (DDG 121) and USS Michael Murphy (DDG112) to support their return to port, catching the attention of Commander, Naval Surface Forces and Commander, Naval Surface Force, Pacific Fleet, Vice Admiral Brendan McLane.

Counselors from JBPHH's MFSC, Laura Little and Duane Barone, headed out to work with Sailors coming back from the Weapons Engagement Zone, preparing service members to reintegrate with their families. Anecdotal accounts from the counselors showed that the Sailors and their families continue to do well.

According to McLane, meeting with Little and Barone was inspiring. He also had a chance to meet all their shipmates at the MFSC.

In an email to CNIC, McLane was blown away by the MFSC's teamwork and passion, and how the base, led by Capt. Samuel White and MFSC mutually supported each other.

"You've got such a strong team here," said McLane. "Wow!"

For more information on Return & Reunion training, contact your installation's Fleet and Family Support Center \(FFSC\).

Kings Bay IPPW Host Wellness Event

The Naval Submarine Base Kings Bay Integrated Primary Prevention Workforce (IPPW) hosted a dynamic Prevention Wellness Event in May, focusing on enhancing the health and well-being of service members and their families. The event featured a broad range of activities and information from preventative medicine, security, a Drug and Alcohol Program Advisor, the Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program and the Fleet and Family Support Center, designed to support physical fitness, mental health, nutrition and responsible lifestyle choices.

Among the many highlights was an activity promoting alcohol awareness and responsible drinking. Participants learned about the risks associated with alcohol misuse, including the often-cited phenomenon of "beer goggles," which shows how judgment can be impaired after drinking. The activities emphasized how making informed decisions around alcohol is essential to maintaining safety, readiness and overall wellness.

The Prevention Wellness Event reinforced the commitment to fostering a strong, healthy and resilient community through education, support and engagement.

NeuroFlow: A Mental Wellness Tool now Available to Sailors at NS Mayport

Mental health is just as important as physical health, and now Sailors at Naval Station (NavSta) Mayport, Florida, have access to the NeuroFlow app.

NeuroFlow is a digital platform designed to support their well-being. It is offered as a pilot for this calendar year and consists of personalized resources to strengthen Sailors' warfighter ethos, track their progress and stay motivated on their mental health journey.

NeuroFlow provides a wide range of tools to support mental wellness. It offers personalized activities, including guided exercises designed to help Sailors strengthen their coping strategies and improve their overall well-being. The platform also includes progress tracking, allowing Mayport Sailors to monitor their mental health growth over time and see their improvements.

Additionally, the application features a reward system with built-in incentives to keep Sailors engaged and motivated as they work toward their wellness goals.

"Sailors need a support system for check-ins and access to mental health resources while serving their country," said Ashley Carmichael, LMHC, supervisory integrated prevention coordinator at NavSta Mayport. "NeuroFlow has shown month after month that there is a need for mental health resiliency in the service, and the added bonus is the points, which equate to gift cards."

Carmichael is actively promoting the app to Sailors at the installation to encourage adoption and awareness of mental wellness.

Getting started is easy. Sailors at NavSta Mayport can scan the QR code or visit <https://neuroflow.app.link/NAVY2024> to download the app and create an account.
